REMINISCENCES OF AN EARLY MICHIGAN SETTLER

Contributed by Mrs. E. B. Kresge

(This letter was written by Silas V. R. Trowbridge on May 1, 1858 and printed in the Pontiac Gazette as the reminiscences of this old settler, who came to Michigan and located in Troy township, Oakland County in 1821. The last four paragraphs of the letter were published by Silas Farmer in his History of Michigan.)

I left Horseheads, Chemung County, New York, on the 11th day of April 1821, for Michigan. I was the first person with a family from that County to cross Lake Erie for a new home; rode to Lima, Livingston Co. in company with my brother-in-law, Vincent Conklin. He returned with my horse from Lima. I was then very poor; this horse was my only property; had collected ninety dollars from some pork and other things. From Lima I commenced the journey on foot against a violent snow storm from the West - put up with farmers every night. I arrived at Buffalo and called upon Ebenezer Norton, with a letter of introduction. He received me very coldly and seemed unwilling to give any information or advice for my journey. I went into a grocery where some men advised me to go through Canada, as the lake was full of ice and no prospect of a vessel up the Lake. I crossed over and the first night put up with Mr. Hill a well-to-do farmer, a Quaker from Pennsylvania, in an early day. Mr. Hill was a good man; he urged me to remain one day; the storm had not abated. From Mr. Hill's I took the Lake shore and kept the Lake shore road, which made a hard journey from the nature of the road and the indentations of the Lake which made the travel very circuitious.

I came on to Talbot street and then up Fishing creek to strike the river Thames. I came out at McWilliams, where I found a kind man, who gave me a particular account of the bloody battle of eighteen mile creek in the long woods. Captain Holmes, U.S.A. stationed at Detroit in January 1814, wished to make an expedition into Canada; had 70 soldiers, U.S. Infantry. Beat up for volunteers and received 100 of the young men of Detroit, procured horses and crossed Detroit river and passed down to Round O, on Lake Erie and took up Fishing Creek. Alarmed all Canada as far down as Fort George. At this Fort were two crack companies of King's troops. The militia of the Province and the Indians were soon under arms, troops from the fort united and went in pursuit of the wild Yankees. The late Major Forsyth and William Meldrum, young men of Detroit, were in the Michigan Volunteers. Captain Holmes had ordered some trees felled on the bank of eighteen mile creek, to roll up log fence fashion in case of need. The spies soon brought word of the rapid advance of the enemy. Robert Forsyth was ordered back to their intended fort to examine for Indians - the word was that 300 Indians were under arms. Mr. Forsyth soon returned and reported all safe and no Indians. Holmes began a retreat, kept a strong rear guard with spies far in rear. He marched to their intended fortifications and commenced rolling up logs. Soon the rifles sounded far in the rear; he collected in the little fort all his force, with their horses. Soon the brave regulars marched upon the opposite bank of the deep ravine and sounded their bugles in defiance.

A council of war was held by the British which ended in division and bad feeling. Captain McGregor of the Canadian Volunteers wished to cross the ravine up the stream and attack the Yankees in the rear. The officers from Europe called Mac a coward and were determined to charge up the opposite bank and take Holmes by storm. They said to McGregor, do as you like, we will be governed by our decision. McGregor went up with his backwoods men and commenced in rear of the little fort. The bugles gave the sound and the regulars charged up the bank. It was as cold a night as ever blew in January. Holmes' men had carried water to the top of the hill which made ice to its base. The British columns got half to the summit and fell back; charged again and fell back. The third charge the front files fell nearly on the summit and the rear guard fell back for good. Such a destruction of human life was seldom known upon so small a space of ground. Seventy men were killed and wounded from the foot to the top of the hill. A small dog laying by the side of a small tree had twelve balls through him. Mr. McMillan went with three sleighs to bring the wounded to his house. Some neighbors took others. The scene on the ground was terrible to behold.

I received from Mr. Ebert with whom I remained over night on river Thames likewise an account of this battle. His near neighbor was shot near him, by imprudently exposing his person to the Yankees against his repeated remonstrances. Holmes had but one man killed near the close of the fight by imprudent exposure. The Indians soon broke and fled. Captain McGregor had an arm broken and shattered - was long known afterwards at Windsor by his one arm. Captain Holmes was afterwards killed at Mackinaw.

I then took the long woods forty miles without an inhabitant. Put up with Mrs. Ward, a pioneer settler at the end of the woods. I came on as far as where Chatham is now located, then I got on board a small vessel manned by two Englishmen who offered me a passage to Detroit. We arrived at Windsor after three days. At Windsor I got aboard a scow, the regular ferry boat. I then saw the first Yankee, Jarius Baldwin, since leaving Buffalo. I enquired of Mr. Baldwin for Major Thomas Rowland, with whom my brother C. C. Trowbridge lived. Major R. was County Clerk, Justice of the Peace and Marshall of the Territory. After landing in Detroit, I soon found Major R's office, and then learned that my brother had crossed the Detroit river, and passed to New York. I found in Major Rowland a strong friend; I received the hospitality of his house for many days.

Detroit was at that time a dull place. On Jefferson Avenue a few scattered wooden buildings; no buildings on Woodward Avenue excepting a small yellow house near Larned street, residence of Charles Larned. Major R. then lived in a house towards the river from Bradley Thompson's former Livery Stable. Austin E. Wing lived across the street. Major R's office was a kind of rendezvous where many a hearty joke was cracked. Charles Larned, John J. Hunt, Robert Smart, Oliver Miller, Doctor Brown, Uncle Russell and Spencer the tanner, Uncle Ben and many others were the old standards.

I heard flattering accounts about the interior of Michigan. Instead of a general swamp it was represented as excellent land. A small colony had settled at a place called Pontiac, where the land was represented as the Garden of Eden. John Todd, Orison Allen, Asa B. Hadsell, Elkanah Hotchkiss, Calvin Hotchkiss, Doctor Olmstead Chamberlain were among the first settlers.

On Monday, I started by way of Buckland's and river Rouge, for the famed region of Pontiac. Slept at Buckland's, river Rouge. Plenty of Indians. Next day left for Pontiac. Buckland said I must go to the forks of river Rouge, then cross the stream on a tree, after some distance take the right hand trail. I went on, found the tree and crossed over, but could not find the proper trail. Started on; about noon met an Indian and his squaw, each one on horse back, asked the old man, how far to Pontiac. He laughed but could not answer. He pointed to the sun and I traveled on, began to suspect I was lost. Increased my pace, soon concluded I was certainly lost and bound to lay out. Near sun down I came to a new chopping where men were logging. I felt encouraged, supposed I was near Pontiac. I enquired. The men said I was four miles from Detroit! I concluded to go back and take a new start. Remained a few days and took a new start with Sidney Dole, Esq. and Captain John W. Hunter. I was discouraged about the land on the road; said to those men it was the barrens of New Jersey.

Came to Doctor Swan's where I received much kindness. I look back with great gratitude to many persons for repeated favors. The first settlers here were Captain John W. Hunter, John Hamilton, Elijah Willet, Dr. Ziba Swan, his sons, Elias Swan, Ziba Swan Jr., Noyes Swan and Sidney Dole Esq. and family (Mrs. Dole was daughter of Dr. Swan), Elijah S. Fish, Imri Fish, William Morris and Amasa Bagley, (afterwards Judge Bagley) Ezra Baldwin and Captain Joseph Almy.

I then went to Pontiac (no garden of Eden) - rough rolling country, white oak timber, no underwood, looked barren and unfruitful - hard winters for new settlers. Came back to Mr. Dole and said I had seen enough of Michigan, I should return home and settle on the mountains of Chemung. He said if I would go up the branch of river Rouge which runs near his place and spend one day in looking at the country I was then dissatisfied with he should be willing I would return. I remained over night and started next morning for Ezra Baldwin's and Captain Joseph Almy's. In passing the fine glade of timber land north of Doctor Swan's, I passed an old Indian planting ground, when I burried my foot to my instep in the black soil, there and then I was converted to a Wolverine. If I could find such land I was bound for Michigan. That day I saw a beautiful country. I made up my mind to bring my little family to the new Territory. I then selected eighty acres on north-west quarter of section 18, town 2 N.R. 11 east. With the aid of friends I was enabled to purchase eighty acres.

I returned to Horse Heads about the 7th of June on the steamer Walk-in-the Water to Buffalo, borrowed a blanket of a new found friend on board, Daniel Hunter, fireman, and brother to J. W. Hunter. It is remarkable how such little acts of kindness will germinate into lasting friendship, in this world. Remained until fall, sold my little property that I could not transport and left with Mrs. Trowbridge, my mother, Mrs. Trowbridge, my wife, and three children, on the 4th day of October, 1821. I arrived on my land on Sunday, the 22nd day of October, 1821.

I experienced many of the hardships attending new settlers, but I was young, with a constitution like a horse. The first settlers in this township (Troy) were Joshua Davis, John Dimond, Michael Beach, John Jones and S.V.R. Trowbridge. Aaron Webster came on same year and settled on section 6, from Cayuga County. In 1822, Johnson Niles came on; Uncle Bill Daniels purchased on section 9 in 1822.

When I arrived at Detroit with my family, I was obliged to hire a wild pair of French steers; no teams in the country. I loaded and started for the new home quite late in the day, arrived at Mrs. Chappel's or "Mother Handsome" as she was commonly called. A turnpike had been made for five miles, and then a horrible road through swamps and marshes. After passing some distance it became dark, road terrible, wife walking, leading one and carrying a great boy of thirty pounds. Oxen wild and ungovernable; spirits sunk; almost sorry that I ever undertook to bring my family to suffer and die in those wild woods. Presently two men came up who cheered us on and agreed to stick by, if all night, to help with the team and children. Noble fellows! and long to be remembered. One was Mr. Miller, father of Mr. Miller, merchant of Rochester, Michigan. Those men were indispensable at this time. I have often since wished that I could do something for some of their children as a token of thanks to those men. About 10 o'clock saw a light from a window. Had concluded to sleep out without fire or supper but finally got to White's tavern, and camped on barroom floor - house was filled with lodgers.

Next day started in good spirits on a firm road for a few miles and came to the Royal Oak tree - a tree named by John J. Hunt, Ezra Baldwin and David McKinstry, commissioners to run a road to Pontiac. The tree was named by Judge John J. Hunt. The other gentlemen had stuck a stake near the tree and Judge Hunt said "we will call this the Royal Oak."

I said to Mrs. Trowbridge, "perhaps you had better walk around this mud hole. I am afraid you may be thrown from the waggon." Mrs. T. got down with the children and then commenced a continuous mud hole for six miles. That was a hard day's travel, through a heavily wooded country, mud to the waggon bed, children constantly becoming fast in the mud, my wife unacquainted with such life, obliged to carry a heavy child. At one time I saw her setting on a log crying, children fast in the mud. I then said, "cheer up, we are near the promised land. You see that light ahead, that is the land of promise."

I called at Doctor Swan's and then came up to our new place where we have lived ever since, the recipients of manifold blessings, temporal and spiritual. The only settlements in this Peninsula then were a few in Oakland. Oliver Williams, father of Gardner, Ephraim, Benjamin, Alpheus, Alfred and James, rolled the first waggon ever started from Detroit for the interior.

LINCOLN BIBLE RECORD

Contributed by Mrs. Douglas G. Conklin, 58 Pine St., Deposit, New York

The Bible containing this record was printed at Brattleboro Power Press Office, 1834. It was found in the attic of a very old house located at McClure, Broome County, New York. There is no mention of any location of any of the events. One concludes that some member of the family must have lived in the house before the memory of any of the present residents of the community.

6. MATHEW[2] ELBRIDGE BUSEY (Mathew[1]) (twin), b. Rowan Co., N.C., 11 Mar. 1779; d. Champaign Co., Ill., 21 Mar. 1864; m. Shelby Co., Ky., 28 Apr. 1814, Sarah Fible, b. Washington Co., Md., 28 Apr. 1791; d. Champaign Co., Ill., 13 May 1887, dau. of Frederick Fible from Germany.

Mathew E. Busey was the first of the Busey family to migrate to Illinois. In November of 1829, he came to Vermilion County bringing his wife and their first eight children by horseback and cart, and his material goods in two wagons pulled by ox teams. The journey from Shelby Co., Ky., lay north across the Ohio and Wabash Rivers, over great prairies, and through large timbers. Following Indian and buffalo trails from timber to timber, the family camped and cooked along the way, completing the trek in four weeks.

At Linn Grove in Vermilion County, Mathew Busey is said to have stopped at the home of a Mr. Straley before his final day's travel over the Linn Road to Big Grove, "Mashaw Montuck" -- an area of timber about three miles wide and twelve miles long growing along a branch of the Salt Fork which is also a branch of the Vermilion River -- located at the northeast limits of the present site of the twin cities, Champaign-Urbana.

The pioneers' arrival that evening was greeted by a deep snow, and the next morning Mathew Busey bought the cabin and squatter's right of Sample Cole on land at the south edge of Big Grove -- two miles east of the site that was to become Urbana. He paid $100 for the cabin, the claim, and the meat on hand, which consisted of bacon from the wild pigs which abounded in the area. Then on 5 Dec. 1829, at the Palestine land Office, Mathew Busey entered this claim to the west half of the northeast quarter of Section 15, Township 19 N, Range 9 E of the 3d Principal Meridian; he took out also another adjoining 80 acres, both claims located in Vermilion, now Champaign Co., Ill.

By treaty, the Kickapoo Indians had left this area in 1819 and the surveying parties had completed their work by 1822. In 1829, five families lived in Big Grove with others scattered in or near timber belts across the prairie. Indians of the Pottawatomie tribe continued to come from their lands in the north to hunt for a season or to remain through the winter.

The Busey home was often visited by the Red Men who always came hungry, craving food from the settlers. Their visits brought fear to Mathew's wife and children when they occurred in his absence, but harm was never inflicted upon them. The Indians were friendly and often helpful to the settlers so no objections to their presence were made until the time of the raid in 1832 by Black Hawk in the northern part of the State. As a result of this encounter, the Pottawatomie were forced to leave with regret and grief the Illinois plains, the home and hunting ground of their ancestors.

In 1829, there were no satisfactory mills to grind grain into meal or flour and the settlers had to take their grain to mills located in Indiana, a round trip of sixteen days. Pilgrimages were made to Indiana, later to Chicago, for the purpose of supplying many of their needs. The people lived by hunting, raising grain and vegetables with enough to exchange in trade. They would form ox team caravans and take bacon, grain, vegetables and fur pelts to exchange for watches, clocks, tools, iron, suiting and dress materials, crockery and glassware, shoes and other merchandise.

No one escaped the ague and fever which prevailed in the low prairies. Ordinary malarial diseases were out of proportion to the number of people as marshes and sloughs, stagnated by the growth of tall prairie grass, generated the poisonous miasma which permeated every dwelling. This condition prevailed many years until large drainage ditches were dug and the land was tiled. Asiatic cholera came to Big Grove in 1834.

Beginning in 1829, subscription schools in scattered townships were opened in donated homes, or small cabins were erected for the purpose. In 1832, one of these schools was taught by Asabel Bruer in the Brumley district on the east side of Big Grove. Buseys attended this school for short sessions. The building was constructed of rough logs with puncheon floors; the seats were slab benches; the windows were made of greased paper; and the one room was warmed by a huge fireplace. Mr. Bruer had about 20 pupils and charged each $2.00 per quarter.

As noted heretofore, Isaac Busey was active in the creation of the county seat at Urbana for the newly formed Champaign County in 1833; he and others of the family were also active in the new local government. When Mathew Busey was solicited for a donation of his land to be used as the site of the county seat, he stated that he had bought his land for a home and not for profit, and although he purchased other acreage he remained on the original farm until his death 31 years later.

In the first tax assessment of Champaign County in 1833, Mathew Busey was taxed on these possessions: 3 horses valued at $150; 15 cows valued at $181; 1 clock or watch valued at $17; total value of property $348 -- total tax assessed $1.74. Isaac Busey was assessed $2.30 and Charles Busey $1.45.

On 13 Nov. 1833, the settlers witnessed the great meteor showers, "when the stars came down like rain," recorded today as the most brilliant one ever observed in this vicinity.

By 1835, mills, a store, some roads, and better markets had been established, so life for the early families began to be slightly less stremuous.

Sarah Fible (Fibel) was the youngest daughter of Frederick Fible who migrated from Germany to Washington Co., Maryland before 1790, at which time there were nine children in the family, four sons above 16 years, two sons under 16 years, and three daughters not including Sarah. About 1793 Frederick Fible and his family migrated to Kentucky, where he lived in Jefferson County in 1800. He may have resided in Shelby County in 1814 where Sarah married Mathew Busey in that year. Sarah (Fible) Busey died in Champaign Co., Ill. at the age of 96 years, with 148 living descendants at the time of her death.

It would appear, then, (see, also, notation below) that other Buseys, perhaps nephews of Mathew[1] Busey migrated from North Carolina with him to Shelby Co., Ky.

As Jacob[2] and Isaac[2] Busey (and Isaac's sons, John[3] and Arthur[3]) were the only male descendants of Mathew[1] Busey remaining in Shelby Co., Ky. in 1830, it is interesting to note on the U.S. Census of Shelby Co., Ky., 1830, this other Busey entry -- David Bucy (Busey) shown to be between the age of 30 and 40 years, his wife between 20 and 30 years and three children under 5 and 10 years of age. Was he a son of Jacob, Isaac, or other?

Spencer Bartlett was appointed guardian of Ann Jennette Hastings, under 14 years of age, on 3 June 1862. On 16 May 1874 Williamsburg was visited by one of the most disastrous floods in the history of New England. To furnish power for the growing industries of the town an earth dam on the Mill river, finished in 1866, held back a pond covering 111 acres to an average depth of 24 feet. When this dam gave way, in about one hour and a half, property, including mills, houses, bridges and roads, to the value of half a million dollars, was swept away and 145 persons in Williamsburg and Leeds were drowned. Among them were Spencer and Salome Bartlett. That all his children escaped is proved by the fact that they are all named in the final distribution of his estate (amounting to $3316.00) on 3 Feb. 1881. On 18 Nov. 1874, George L. DSGR MAGAZINE, Vol. XX, No. 1, Fall 1956.

p. 9. Under 4 PHILIP LAWRENCE HOUTZ. He married 2nd, Anna Catherine Daub 1777.

p. 10. Under 4(12) Samuel Houtz. Delete mention of Samuel Smith. An error in an abstract of a Franklin Co., Pa. record was made. William L. Smith was the administrator. Samuel Houtz was late of Letterkenny Twp.

p. 13. Under paragraph on 41 ELIZABETH HOUTZ Hefflefinger. Frederick is said to have been the brother (not the son) of Philip Hefflefinger, fifer in the American Revolution. Shaefferstown, Pa., Reformed Church Records give several baptisms of children of Martin Hefflefinger and Anna Maria (Wolfersberger) Hefflefinger. Among these was John Frederick, b. 4 Nov. 1766, bpt. 30 Nov. It is believed that this may be the Frederick Hefflefinger who married Elizabeth Houtz.

p. 14. To the references should be added Cumberland Co. Penna. Orphans' Court, Vol. 5, p.174, concerning Frederick Hefflefinger and his children up to that (1811) time who were heirs under the (1796) will of Philip (Lawrence)Houts, late of Mifflin Twp. Later orphans' court records make it possible to identify the Hefflefinger children more definitely as given in the manuscript.

MEMBERSHIP LIST

The first 26 members listed were charter members of the church when it was organized Feb. 21, 1849. If the member came in by transfer or letter from another church, that church is recorded. If this is not given it may be assumed that the member entered the church by profession of faith. Membership in the church terminated when the member transferred to another church, lost touch with the church and was dropped from the roll, or by death. Since marriage entailed a change of name for young ladies, their married name was written in later.

IN MEMORY: Estella Mead Paterson, a charter member of the Detroit Society for Genealogical Research, died after a brief illness on June 20, 1957 and was buried in Oak Hill cemetery in Grand Rapids, Michigan. Mrs. Paterson was the daughter of Ezra and Althea (Smith) Mead, born in Ada, Michigan, September 6, 1873. (For her ancestry, see S. P. Mead's Mead Genealogy (1901).) In 1900 she came to Detroit and was employed in the offices of the Pere Marquette Railway until her marriage, April 12, 1926, to Reginald P. Paterson as his second wife. There are no surviving members of her immediate family. Mrs. Paterson was active in several organizations: the Methodist church kept her faith; the Red Cross knew her for her social work; she was proud of her membership in the Huguenot Society and the Louisa St. Clair chapter of the D.A.R. From its inception she was devoted to this society, serving in various offices and giving many hours of her time as expert typist. Only a few days before her death she completed the final typing of a large volume of cemetery records which will be found in the files of the Burton Historical Collection.

Bryant Cemetery is the first burial ground in Macedon Township, located north of Yellow Mills in a corner of a farmyard on the northwest corner of Yellow Mills Road and the road running parallel to the Canal on the north. Its condition is poor; many stones are completely covered with undergrowth and invisible unless walked on; probably there were many stones not found.

IN MEMORY: Gracie Brainerd Krum died August 14, 1957. Older members of this society will read that item and their minds will turn back twenty years to the days of our beginning. Miss Krum was then chief of staff of Burton Historical Collection of the Detroit Public Library. She gave us advice and, most of all, a wonderful home base. Much of our early success was no doubt due to the way she watched out for us. Through all the years, she took pride in our accomplishments. She was a charter member of the society and later made an honorary life member.

Miss Krum, who was born September 28, 1874, was of English, Palatine German and Dutch ancestry. Her parents were Alburn Hager Krum and Ethalind Brainerd. She was born in New York City on Washington Heights, not far from the scene of many of the most important events in our history. "I did not have to learn to like history," she said, "I was born to it."

She attended both private and public schools in New York City and was graduated from the City Normal College (now Hunter College). There she was the first student to receive the Charles Wehrum prize for the best essay on American Patriotism. She taught for a year or two in New York City and for one year in Detroit after coming here with her father.

In July, 1900 she began her work in the Detroit Public Library, a work which was to continue until 1941. Here began what was to be her greatest interest in life; the study of the history of Detroit and the desire that the citizens of Detroit should be aroused to know and to appreciate that history. She took some courses in library science, a new study at the time. She spent two years as first librarian of the first branch library in Detroit to open in its own building, the George Van Ness branch library.

Then on July 1, 1914 she began to organize the private library of Mr. Clarence M. Burton, which had been given to the city of Detroit. (For Miss Krum's own account of the Burton Collection, see this magazine for November 1939.) So she began the development of the library which has become one of the great libraries of Americana and genealogy in this country.

In more than a half century of service to the city, Miss Krum fostered most of the efforts dedicated to making its people conscious of its long and fascinating history. For this service she received many citations and medals. She was a member of many patriotic and historical societies and was active in them, although for several years she was totally blind.

Services were held in Detroit on August 16. She was then taken home to New York City for burial in Woodlawn Cemetery. There are no survivors.

BACKGROUND FOR GENEALOGY
Minnie Dubbs Millbrook

The woodmanship of the first colonists to America was slight and the problem of shelter was for a time acute. They had brought tents but these were not only inadequate but soon rotted away. As Bradford said in New England: "And till such time as we could houses get, We were much exposed to cold and wet." Some tried half-heartedly to imitate the Indian wigwam; others made dugouts and lived as John Smith phrased it, in "holes within the ground." The wigwam might have served them temporarily as it was easily constructed, adapted to the climate and easily elaborated. But although the colonists were finally forced to eat the Indian's food, they rejected his shelter as they did his dress. The dwellings that persisted in their minds and hearts were the houses at home in England. As soon as they could master some slight skill with the ax and the saw they began building houses from the wood of the forests. These first houses are now represented as having been made of vertical planks set in the ground and roofed with thatch. But very soon the new-comers began building the framed houses covered with clapboards as in England.

Jasper Danckearts, the Dutch traveller spent a miserable night in such a house in 1679 and describing it, wrote, "nearly all the English houses in the country are like this." The split clapboards were five or six feet long and were "nailed on the outside of the frame with the edges lapped over one another, generally not so close as to keep you from sticking a finger between them, because of their not being well joined or because of the boards being crooked." The scarcity of nails probably accounted somewhat for the poor construction of this house.

Proceeding on his way, Danckearts later spent a comfortable night in another kind of a house, "made in the Swedish manner... very tight and warm... built without a nail or spike." He was in a log cabin. Although in 1679 the fashion of building a house with whole logs had spread only a few miles from the point of its first use in America, its fame spread quickly thereafter. The log cabin became the typical frontier dwelling of the American pioneer in his westward migration. The log cabin had many advantages. Little skill or labor was required to prepare the material, the ax was the only necessary tool and no nails were needed. A fair cabin could be built with six man-days of labor. The thick logs, well chinked, provided insulation from the weather, were almost impervious to bullets and could only be set afire with difficulty. The cabin was extremely durable and seldom needed repair.

Although neither New England or Virginia utilized the snug log cabin, their cold, shackly houses came in time to be "orderly and well-built." Besides copying the style and method of their native land, the colonists also copied the English village pattern of setting their houses close together. Although they had a whole continent in which to expand, they often built two or three storied houses in a continuous row along the street. There were some practical advantages in this as one wall sufficed for two houses and each gave the other some protection from the cold. As there was little transportation, a compact town was convenient. However as long as the houses were built of wood, they were a frightful fire hazard. The remedy for this was the use of less flamable material. As the forests receded from the sea coast cities, brick actually became cheaper than wood and was extensively used. In the cities of Philadelphia and Baltimore there are still many of these brick row houses. Even the small villages had their row houses and the houses on the farms tended to be high and narrow.

Not until about 1870 occurred the impulse that brought our country a more original, distinctive domestic architecture. Wood for building was still plentiful and the railroads supplied the transportation to set it down anywhere in the country. Coal by the same carrier, was available for heating. Street cars encouraged a wider dispersal of homes within the towns. The result was a new type of dwelling and a new way of living. Houses became detached and separate; they were set back from the street with a yard on all sides. Windows grew larger, ceilings higher and every house had a porch. Each builder felt free to express his individuality and a jumble of styles resulted. Basically though the house remained the same framed structure imported by the colonists from England.

With the automobile, homes have become more and more dispersed. Due to the lack of servants they have again contracted in size. But the great change in modern homes has been the equipment of the interior which now is a complete mechanical complex. It is the automatic heaters, washers, cookers, refrigerators, etcetera that make the American home so different from that of the rest of the world.

Richard Harding, Early Immigrant to Weymouth, Massachusetts

The first Hardings to arrive in Massachusetts were three brothers, Richard, Joseph, and John, sons of John Harding of Northamptonshire, England. They came with Captain Robert Gorges and his wife, Mary Harding, their cousin, and settled in Weymouth in 1623. Joseph married Martha Doane of Plymouth in 1624; John lived in Weymouth and died in 1650.

Richard Harding was over forty years of age when he and his first wife came to New England. She died before 1630. His second wife, Elizabeth Adams died in 1664. His children were: John, Stephen, and Lydia.

Stephen Harding, ca 1624 to 1698; m. Bridget Estrance, daughter of Thomas Estrance of Swansea, Massachusetts. Their children were: John, Abraham, Priscilla, Sarah, Mary, and another daughter who married Alexander Balcom.

Abraham Harding, 1656 to 1694, m. Deborah ----. Their children were: John, Mercy, Isreal, Stephen, Lydia, Deborah, and Thomas.

Stephen Harding, 1681 to 1750; name of wife, unknown. His children were: John, Abraham (b. 14 June 1720, ancestor of the late President Warren G. Harding), Stephen, Thomas, Isreal, and a daughter.

With his wife Amy Gardner, Stephen Harding, b. 1723, d. 1789, settled at Colchester, Connecticut. Their children all born at Colchester were: Amy, Lydia, Jamina, Stephen, Jr. (a private in the American Revolution with the Pennsylvania troops under Captain Robert Durkee), Thomas, Benjamin, Stukely, Isreal, Esther, Micajah, Elisha, John, and William. In 1774, Stephen Harding with several other Harding families migrated westward and settled in the Wyoming Valley of Pennsylvania, now Exeter, Luzerne County. At the time of the Wyoming Massacre, 3 July 1778, Captain Stephen Harding was in command of Fort Jenkins. Two of his sons, Benjamin and Stukely were massacred by Indians. His wife, Amy (Gardner) Harding aided in burying the dead. Stephen and Amy Harding were buried in the Jenkins-Harding Cemetery in West Pittston, Pennsylvania.

In 1793, Micajah Harding, b. 1761, d. 1849, m. Betsey ----, was commissioned Captain for a term of seven years in the Fourth Company of the Second Regiment of the Luzerne Brigade of the Militia of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. Did Micajah Harding serve earlier in the American Revolution? He moved from Luzerne Co., Pennsylvania to Wayne Co., New York, where his children: Micajah, Jr., Daniel, Jessie, Sallie, and Lucy were born. In 1829, he migrated to Lima Township, Lagrange Co., Indiana.

Daniel Harding, b. 1792, d. 1871, m. (1) Nancy Jewel, dau. of David and Alice (Tremain) Jewel; m. (2) Clarissa ----. Daniel and Nancy Harding were buried in Hoagland Cemetery, Bloomfield Township, Lagrange Co., Indiana. Their children were: Sarah, Alice, Norman, Eliza, Helen, William, and Eliphlet.

At Lima (now Howe), Indiana, Eliphlet Harding, m. 24 Sept. 1842, Mary Elizabeth Shoup, b. 1823, d. 1913. Their children were: Myron Jewel, Eliza Luretta, and Mary Frances. Eliphlet Harding went West during the gold rush of 1849, and with several other men was drowned crossing the Platte River in Nebraska. It was three months later before his wife and children received the message which was brought to them at Lima by a man on horse back. In 1851, Elizabeth (Shoup) Harding married John Burr Sayles and in 1859 they moved to Vandalia, Illinois. He was a cavalry sergeant in the Civil War and was taken prisoner in Stoneman's raid while with General Sherman on his march to the sea. John Sayles died of starvation in Andersonville Prison, Georgia.

Eliphlet Harding is not listed in Harding genealogies. However, a will dated 14 March 1870, made by Daniel Harding is recorded at Lagrange Co., Indiana. Quote, "Item 4. REPORT OF MEETINGS
Roy E. McFee

Our Society relaxed at another annual picnic on Saturday, June 8. The attractive site was Kensington Metropolitan Park. Miss Lucy Mary Kellogg, Program Chairman, had tied bright green ribbons on the route signs leading to Orchard Picnic Area. A wood fire burned cheerily in the fireplace of the shelter, while all the magnificent park gleamed in the sunshine. Sixty members and their friends were there, some coming from as far away as Flint and Saginaw.

The group lingered over the meal, with icecream a final surprise. The park superintendent explained about Kensington. Then Francis Waring Robinson presided over the heirloom program.

Mrs. Clifford B. Smith talked on her collection of children's toys, dishes and silver, Harry P. Baker showed a letter written in 1840, by a great-grandfather, but only recently found and opened! Lot A. Merrill read a letter telling of his parents' marriage, and another written by his mother, telling of his own birth.

Mrs. Harrison, guest of Mr. and Mrs. Baker, showed a bootjack used by a major all through the Civil War. Mrs. D. F. Bovee spoke on a pedigree chart of the famed Anneke Jans Bogardus. Mrs. Leah Sutton Talliaferro brought a nightcap once belonging to her grandmother 110 years ago. A booklet on a tool museum was the subject of Mrs. Alleen McKee Wright.

Mr. Morningstar showed records of his family, translated from the German. A great-grandfather's carpenter tool, edged on one side and toothed on the other, was explained by Lucy Mary Kellogg. Mrs. Russell Barr had a contract signed by her husband's grandfather. Mrs. Morningstar brought a photograph album of girlhood days. Miss Sarah Van Hoosen Jones read a letter from our first president, Edwin P. Hill. And drafting instruments of her great-grandfather, a civil engineer on the building of Brooklyn Bridge, was the display of Miss Alice Serrell.

A thimble given a grandmother on her fiftieth wedding anniversary was the heirloom of Mrs. Lewis Chase. Mrs. Milford H. Hicks had a bullet mold owned by a Revolutionary ancestor. Mr. and Mrs. Maurice W. Fox brought tools and a drinking glass originally from Berlin. Lewis Chase spoke about a family photograph taken in farm dooryard, with himself shown in baby carriage. Francis Waring Robinson held up a large ladle bought by him in Cobleskill, New York. Next, we saw Mrs. Stephen M. Cotter's star, saved from a Civil War battle flag.

A book, Kress Family History, one of the few copies preserved through the Russian invasion of Germany, was presented to the Society for giving to Burton, by Mrs. Charles King. An amazed gasp and great applause followed instantly. Even Mrs. Bovee's modest fox terrier, Bonnie, was moved to make her delighted barks resound over the hand clapping and happy tumult.

President George R Raub, Sr., read a message from Miss Mabel Louise Keech, and spoke briefly to close the interesting program. Thus ended another historic day for the Society.

The 22nd year of our Society began brilliantly with the meeting of September 14. Mrs. Elleine H. Stones, soon to retire after notable years as Chief of the Burton Historical Collection, gave another of her delightful talks on the resources of Burton. In enthusiastic appreciation of her work and helpfulness, the Society made her an Honorary Life Member.

Then followed absorbing talks on "The Mayflower II," by cooperation between Walter Glenn Scott, Governor of the Society of Mayflower Descendants in the State of Michigan, and Maurice W. Fox, its Historian. Both, of course, are our members also.

Mr. Fox spoke first. He and Mrs. Fox, a year ago, saw the Mayflower II being built in the Upham Shipyards at Brixham, England. The project had been conceived almost at the same time by an Englishman, Warwick Charlton, and an American, Henry Hornblower II. They later met and agreed to collaborate, with Mr. Charlton promoting the actual construction. In all, a quarter million of the English people visited the yard to see this replica of the first Mayflower, and to contribute whole-heartedly to the cost. Mr. and Mrs. Fox found tremendous interest everywhere in this token of Anglo-American friendship. The Mayflower II finally sailed, on April 20, 1957. To board the ship at Plymouth, England, the crew walked down ancient granite steps, quite possibly the very steps trodden in 1620 by the original Pilgrims.

Mr. Scott continued the story by telling of Mr. Hornblower's work meanwhile on this side of the Atlantic. With the backing of people's contributions, he organized a non-profit company dedicated to honoring the Pilgrim band. He gave it a name with early spelling: Plimouth Plantation. This corporation is providing a permanent berth at Plymouth, Massachusetts, for the Mayflower II and will acquire title to the ship. After visits along our Eastern Coast, this boat will be again at Plymouth by the summer of 1958 -- then to stay. It will thus be a part of a new village reproducing the original settlement. There future generations will see thatched cottages and the huts of Indians, with the restored Pilgrim homes, including those of Governor Bradford, Elder Brewster, Myles Standish and John Alden.

ANSWERS

1867: J-13: JACKSON-LACY:- In 1692/3 Susan (Jackson) Lacy and her husband, Edward, were living in Salem, Mass. The date, 1657 would seem to be correct. It is probable that her parents lived in Salem or Boston, and it is possible that local records might disclose her parentage.

1862: S-95: WOODROW-SHINN:- The family of Joshua Woodrow consisted of Joshua Woodrow and his wife, Elizabeth, sons, Joshua Jr. and Joseph, and three daughters, Elizabeth and Mary, who married George and Francis Shinn, and Rachel, who married Col. Allen Trimble, who, afterwards was a distinguished Congressman, U.S. Senator, and Governor of Ohio.

Joshua Woodrow entered into a successful business in Hillsboro. The family removed to Hillsboro, Ohio, in 1808 from Culpepper Co., Va.

GENEALOGY IN THE MIDWEST (or Mideast - which are we?): Meredith B. Colket, Jr. of Washington has left the National Archives to become director of the Western Reserve Historical Society in Cleveland . . . Mr. James M. Babcock, formerly of the University of Oklahoma at Norman, Okla., was introduced at our September meeting by Mrs. Elleine Stones as her prospective successor as Chief of the Burton Historical Collection . . . and Mrs. E. Gray Williams of Kalamazoo, who is continuing the indexing of periodicals started by Mr. Jacobus, reports she has a file of index slips, twelve feet long, to date.

DOWN-BUT-NOT-OUT: Mrs. Charles W. Holden of Green Bay, Wis. broke her hip in California last winter; spent several months in hospitals before returning; is confined to a wheel chair most of the time but reports spunkily "I'm handicapped but still going strong.". . . Mrs. Frances Ida Judd of 233 W. Nevada, Detroit has been ill for several months, but still enjoys talking genealogy with her visitors . . . 1957 has been a bit unfriendly in Lincoln Park, Mich. Mrs. John H. Harris' broken ankle in January put her on crutches for months; her husband had surgery in Veterans Hospital this summer; and just to keep up with his folks, son John in Muskegon had minor surgery too. Maybe the confinement helped them find the time but they've been writing up records all year . . . Mr. and Mrs. Clarence R. Mrs. Martin has served 2 years as regent of her DAR chapter and the count on grandchildren has risen to ten.

Mrs. Sabria Palmer Lamb celebrated her 84th birthday by re-enacting 1890 teaching experiences in the Scotch Settlement School (now in Greenfield Village) . . . The McTeer family have moved -- bag, baggage and Frances' notes -- to Brooktondale, Tompkins Co., N.Y. where they will spend the coming year. Shortly before her departure, some of Frances' associates on the magazine and board got together for a picnic; the rain kept everyone indoors, eating and talking; it is reported no one shirked either duty.

Mrs. Loren Rodewald of Muskegon and Mrs. Floyd Moore of Kalamazoo attended the 1957 Institute of Genealogical Research at the American University in Washington, as did Mrs. Walter Mayer of the Flint Genealogical Society . . . The Seminars on American Culture at Cooperstown, N.Y. brought 5 DSGR members together, Mrs. R.M. Laurie of London, Ontario, Mrs.E.Gray Williams of Kalamazoo, Mrs. Donald Bovee of Birmingham, Mrs. Carroll Paul of Marquette and Lucy Mary Kellogg of Brighton. They must have advertised us a bit, for the N.Y. State Historical Association has since subscribed to our magazine and purchased a complete file of back issues and indexes.
